Introduction

The Persian Film Festival is an independent event that is held during the Iran International Festival at the Türkan Şoray Cultural Center. It is co-organized with the Antalya Municipality, as well as Iranian filmmakers in Antalya, Turkey. The festival was held from the 20th to the 24th of March, 2024. This festival is the prelude to holding one of the main Persian Awards.

The festival was held in three main parts:

1. Film Screenings
2. Conferences
3. Film Market

Film Screenings

The works of Iranian filmmakers, including short films, feature films, documentaries, animations, etc., as well as works in Persian or featuring Iranian actors, were displayed in this section.

Conferences

This specialized conference was held with the participation of film production and distribution professionals, as well as professionals of different nationalities.

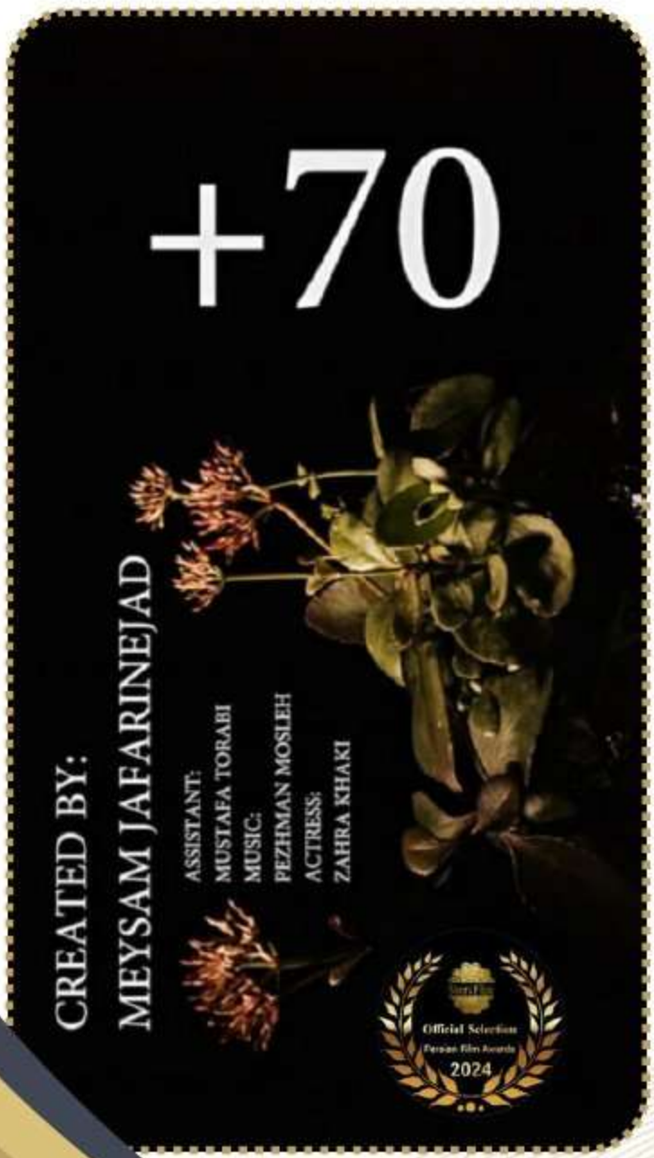

Film Market

Simultaneously with the different parts of the festival, the film market was implemented as the most important need of filmmakers and distributors in cooperation with international companies.

Flower Pot

The story happens on an early holiday morning in the house of a family in a suburb. A typical family morning is disrupted by a random object at the doorstep. An immigrant family is settled after the initial first years of struggling. They have already overcome the hardships of settling in a new country and life seems to be flowing with a normal current until an unsolicited FLOWER POT suddenly, and with no trace of its sender, finds her way at this family's doorstep! The flowerpot, although an inanimate object, precipitates a series of reactions from each member of this family. Fear is their first reaction, one that the author, in reaction to his first encounter to a foreign country, experienced. And then the fear changes into intimacy. Everyone associates, kindheartedly, the flowerpot to one another thinking the flowerpot was put at the door as a gesture of appreciation! But does it stop here? Perhaps not. When Everyone leaves the table, on their own, stuck by their own ego, can't help but to relate the flowerpot to their own achievements or perhaps to anything worthy of such recognition. The family arguments start to escalate as now everyone believes he or she owns and deserves the pot. And yet everyone is trying in vain to prove it! They give up. The family, unfortunate to enjoy a calm weekend, after a desperate search for a true meaning to this new thing in their home, decides to leave the house and find a new place, perhaps another doorstep and leave it somewhere there. The flowerpot is inspired by the author's life events. A first generation immigrant, now having passed the stereotypical clichés of an immigrant, finds himself least interested in showing pathos and receiving merci and empathy for being an immigrant. This short film is inspired from Eternity and a Day by Angelo Pelos. The sarcasm in this work is close to the works of Woody Allen. But the work, in its entirety, is a reminder of 2001: A Space Odyssey. The author demonstrates, through an artistic and symbolic approach, a series of reactions, all triggered when encountered by an alien object. A recurring and circular motif found regardless of the generations who encounter them.

Journey

In the early 1960s, Dr. Edward Keall now an 81-year-old Canadian-British archeologist was a young man studying in London. He had become interested in Iranian history, and thus embarked on a life-changing journey. In 1974, he acquired the necessary team and equipment from the Royal Ontario Museum and ventured to a remote village in western Iran. It was there at Yazdegerd Castle, after a great deal of struggle, that he ultimately made a paramount historical discovery regarding Iran's Arsacid and Sassanid eras. This mysterious castle from an ancient civilization presented Edward Keall with many discoveries about the last king of the Sassanid dynasty, as well as that era's magnificent architecture. The promise of years of future work and discovery were dashed by Iran's 1978 revolution. Edward's Western foreigner status made it too dangerous to continue his excavations, and led to his departure from Iran for safety in Canada, amidst lost hopes and lost promise.

Song of God

When an Iranian-Canadian filmmaker encounters the story of a Kurdish 120 year old Tanbūr player, Ghadamyar, he takes off on a mission to discover more about this spiritual master's musical and enchanting life. The film follows his journey to Western Iran, where he deciphers the ancient traditions and teachings of Ghadamyar's Yarsani faith with regards to this mysterious instrument. The film takes audiences through a musical and visual quest, amidst rugged landscapes, undiscovered voices, and spiritual nuances. We witness the collective mastery of Yarsani Tanbūrists in prayer as a practice to maintain their identity and inner world in search of a beauty.
